Claims 1-20 (canceled)

21. (previously presented) A method comprising:
providing an image capturing device comprising:

- a display screen formed on a surface of said image capturing device;
- a cover capable of moving between a first closed condition in which said cover is positioned over said display screen and a second retracted condition in which said cover is not positioned over said display screen, said cover comprising at least a first cover portion and a second cover portion; and
- a guide device that retains said cover against said surface of said image capturing device;

causing said first cover portion to move in a first direction by moving said second cover portion in a second direction, opposite said first direction and thereby moving said cover from said first closed condition to said second retracted condition.
